

WELCOME TO DURANGO

With more than 16,000 residents, Durango is the largest town in southwest Colorado, with locals who love the high quality of life.

Durango is a short drive from the Four Corners, which is where New Mexico, Arizona, Utah and Colorado meet. The surrounding landscape of Durango is diverse, including the red sandstone bluffs of the Animas River Valley and the jagged peaks of the San Juan Mountains. To the west lies arid desert lands, and to the south lies the southern border of the two million acre San Juan National Forest.

THINGS TO DO

There's something to do in Durango in all seasons. Biking or walking on the River Trail is a great way to see the town, and there are plenty of hiking trails. In addition, with so many musicians in Durango, there are usually shows to attend at the local coffee shops or bars. For some ideas of what to do, check out the following links:
